

The Great SPEEDPRO JOURNEY OF TWENTY FIFTEEN

The Great SpeedPro Journey of 2015 (A.K.A. We've Moved!)

History has witnessed many great journeys. In 1804 Lewis and Clark trekked across North America. In 1919, Charles Lindbergh piloted the first transatlantic flight. And in 2015, SpeedPro Imaging made the great 1.1 mile journey down Industrial Road. While our journey may not compare in terms of distance, danger, or grandiosity - moving three delicate printers weighing in at 23,000 pounds collectively, hundreds of rolls of various media, sheets of substrates, finishing supplies, 6 offices, and an entire kitchen - is not an undertaking to be scoffed at. And just to point out, no pirogue, keeled boat, nor The Spirit of St. Louis could have moved this much stuff. Just saying.

There were challenges: weekends were sacrificed, the coffee maker was misplaced for days on end, and the schlepping, oh the schlepping! But we persevered, we made it through. Despite the odds (that may or may not have been heavily in our favor -- we did hire two moving companies, after all) ...we're back! With caffeine strong in our veins (Mr. Coffee was found and returned to his loving home) we're up, running, and back to business. So give us a call - let the printing commence!

Estimation. Office scale only weighs objects 35lbs. and under.*